On April 16, 2019, people around the world woke up in surprise to find out that a fire broke out at Notre-Dame of Paris the night before. It took more than 15 hours and over 400 firefighters to put out the massive fire.

Most of the building's top and floors were burnt down. And the video of Notre-Dame's famous spire falling down during the fire was passed on through the Internet. Lots of people cried sadly when they saw this old building break down. Luckily, the beautiful rose windows and the bells on the west side of Notre-Dame weren't damaged in the fire. Also, the twelve Apostles, giant art pieces made of stones, were taken to somewhere safe in time. But not every work of art stored in Notre-Dame was saved. Some paintings were turned all black by the thick smoke.

Lots of money was raised by people from different countries shortly after French President, Emmanuel Macron, started the project to fix Notre-Dame. The fire is treated seriously because Notre-Dame is not only a special Gothic building but an important church. It has been even more well-known since Victor Hugo wrote Notre-Dame de Paris, a story about a hunchback man living in Notre-Dame. Notre-Dame is visited by more than 10 million visitors each year, but now people have to wait for a long time before they can see the beautiful building again. It is hoped what we lost in the fire of Notre-Dame does make people remember that we should care more about these old buildings.
