Finding ways to put exercise into the busy everyday schedule sounds hard for many people. However, effective exercise in fact doesn't take you too much time or make you tired. The latest study shows that you can feel better about yourself physically and mentally with only some small exercise – even just a fifteen-minute walk. In other words, you can own strong health and get away from worries without spending long hours working out at a gym. What you need to keep in mind is to “start slow and have fun.” Then you will be well on your way to using physical exercise as a tool to make you feel better every day.

The “no pain, no gain” view of exercise is now out of date. Many health studies tell us that exercise doesn't have to be hurt to be effective. We might think that if working out doesn't give you aches, it isn't working. According to fitness trainers, physically intensive exercises such as weight training or aerobics may make you breathe heavily and your muscles may ache for a short time, but exercise shouldn't be painful. In fact, if it is, it may lead to an injury. Many other kinds of exercise – like walking, swimming, or easy stretching – get results without the aching or tiredness that people often associate with exercise.

For your own health, it is time to make regular exercise a part of your life. Keep in mind that a small exercise for a short time can also make a big change to your health. So, no matter how busy you are, try to make time for exercise every day, like a fifteen-walk with your dog. Your body will thank you in many ways.

(D) Exercise has something to do with our health.
36. What is this reading mainly about?
- (A) Experience at a gym.
(B) How important intensive exercise is.
(C) The myth about exercise.
(D) The tips to stay healthy.

III.

The Mice called a meeting last night to decide on a plan to free themselves of their enemy, the Cat. At least they wished to find some way of knowing when she was coming, so they might have time to run away. This plan was necessary because they lived in such fear of being caught that they couldn't have a happy life every day.

The Mice came up with many plans, but none of them was thought good enough. At last a very young Mouse got up and said:

“I have a plan that can be easily carried out, and I know it will be successful.”

“All we have to do is to hang a bell around the Cat's neck. When we hear the bell ringing, we will know right away that our enemy is coming.”

All the Mice were much surprised that they had not thought of such a plan before. But when they were cheering for their wonderful idea, an old Mouse got up and said:

“I will say that the plan of the young Mouse is very good. But let me ask one question first: Who will bell the Cat?”

37. What does the story want to tell us?
- (A) Never put all eggs in one basket.
(B) To say is one thing; to do is another.
(C) Think twice before you jump.
(D) Kill two birds with one stone.

IV.

Psychiatrists are special doctors. They help people with their feelings and emotions. They are experts at understanding how our minds work and finding ways to make us feel better when we are sad or worried. Let's get into the world of psychiatrists and learn about their important job.

When someone is feeling really down or scared, they can talk to a psychiatrist. Psychiatrists are good listeners. They ask questions and help people talk about their feelings. By understanding what's bothering someone, psychiatrists can give helpful advice and strategies to make someone feel happier and more confident.

Psychiatrists work in comfortable offices where people can feel easy and relaxed. They might talk to kids, young people, or grown-ups. Sometimes, they play games or use art to help kids show their feelings. Psychiatrists also help people when they have trouble focusing, are too nervous, or can't sit still. They might suggest activities or exercises to make these feelings more manageable. Psychiatrists work closely with families and schools to make sure everyone understands how to support the person who needs help.

Did you ever disagree on something with a friend or a family member? It could be about which computer game to play, who could get the last cookie, or something else. In fact, something like this happens to everyone. First, let's talk about

- 1. Differing Ideas: Sometimes, people have different ideas. When they can't agree on something, they may get angry and even start to fight. Let's take Lily and Sarah as an example. The two sisters loved playing with the same toy, a beautiful unicorn. One day, they both wanted to play with it, but there was only one unicorn. They started shouting at each other and even pushing each other.
- 2. Protection and Safety: When people feel they're in danger, they fight to protect their things or to stay safe. Here is an example from history. A long time ago, in a place called Boston, many American people were mad at British officers because the British officers treated them badly, and they felt that they had no say in all the rules. So, the American people decided to stand up for themselves, and this led to the American Revolution.
- 3. Misunderstandings: In some cases, people end up in fights because they just don't understand each other. Here is an example. In a beautiful garden, there were two groups of ants: the Red Ants and the Black Ants. Both of the groups lived happily in their own parts of the garden. One sunny day, the Red Ants decided to build a bridge to get to a picnic place on the other side of the garden. They worked hard to collect leaves and sticks for their bridge. When the Black Ants saw the Red Ants building the bridge, they didn't understand what was happening. The Black Ants thought the Red Ants were taking over their land. So, the Black Ants started to call for more friends to protect their homes. What happened next was a big fight! The Red Ants just wanted to have a picnic, but the Black Ants thought they were under attack. It was a big misunderstanding.

People have reasons for getting into fights, but remember that fighting is not the best way. We can learn to listen to each other, share, and be kind. That way, we can stop turning small things into large ones and make the world a better place.

41. Which one is the best for the missing part _____?
- (A) how fights may start. (B) what fights bring to us.
(C) why people get tired. (D) how people stop fights.

42.

Jake was a quiet and kind student, and he loved playing with unicorns. One day, a classmate named Max started picking on Jake and taking away Jake's dolls. Max even pushed him around on the playground. At first, Jake tried to keep away from him, but things got worse day by day. Jake couldn't take it anymore. He finally fought with Max.

In which item does the story of Jake and Max fall?

- (A) Differing Ideas (B) Protection and Safety
(C) Misunderstandings (D) None of the above.

43. Which is true?
- (A) The writer uses stories to tell us the dark side of getting into fights with others.
(B) The writer gives the readers some good ways to turn small things into big fights.
(C) The British officers made the rules without listening to the American people.
(D) The Red Ants wanted to take over the whole garden, and the Black Ants did, too.
