Weddings are always a happy time for all people around the world. The couple celebrate their special moment and share the joy with their close family and friends. In the US, there is usually a ceremony in a church or at a beautiful outdoor spot. During the ceremony, the couple promise to love and care for each other. After the ceremony, there is a wedding party and that includes cutting the cake and the wedding dance. The couple dance alone first and other guests join in. As for wedding gifts, the couple make a list of things they want or need for their new life. Then the guests usually choose and buy one from the list.

In Taiwan, there are more ceremonies on the wedding day. For example, the couple will serve tea to their parents to be thankful for all they have done for them. The most important part is the banquet, or ban-doh. Before the banquet, guests give their wedding gifts. Most people would like to give money and put it in the red envelopes to the couple. Then, everyone sits at a big round table covered by the red tablecloth. There are usually more than ten dishes at a wedding banquet. Each dish wishes the couple good luck in some way. During the banquet, the couple and their parents go to each table and toast the guests. The banquet lasts for about three hours. In the end, the couple wait at the exit, giving away candy. Some guests will take pictures with them. They surely have a great time.

Weddings are different from country to country. If you have a chance to be invited to a wedding, it will be a wonderful experience that you'll never forget.
