The famous director, Ang Lee, was born in Taiwan in 1954. He graduated from the National Taiwan College of Arts and moved to the USA to continue his studies. At the University of Illinois , he met Jane, a microbiologist, whom he married in 1983. Later, Jane gave birth two sons, Han and Mason, who were both born in the States. After that, he went to New York to start his career of making movies.

In the beginning, he had difficulty realizing his dream of making movies. His wife was the only one that always supported him. In 1991, his first successful movie came out, Pushing Hands, a film about a clash between cultures as a Taiwanese father moves to the States to live with his son. Besides this one, his next two movies The Wedding Banquet and Eat Drink Man Woman, are also about fatherhood. Two of these three movies received Oscar nominations.

In 2005, he directed Brokeback Mountain. This movie is about two cowboys finding love in Wyoming, which picked up several Oscars nominations and won him the award for Best Director.

Appalachia runs throughout the Great Smoky Mountains and encompasses seven states in the Southern US. Many of the first white settlers in Appalachia came from the British Isles, and they brought stories and superstitions that have changed over the years. As time went on, white settlers’ stories mixed with Native American and African American legends, building the place into a mystery, where strange things always seem to be happening.

Over two hundred years ago, strange ghost lights began appearing over Brown Mountain in North Carolina. The first person who saw and reported the lights was a German engineer, John William Gerard de Brahm, who wrote of lights over the North Carolina hills in his journal in 1771. Following Brahm’s account, several legends about lights over the mountains were passed down. Many people who have seen the lights say the glowing orbs dance over the hills soundlessly until they silently disappear.

In 1922, the United States Ecological Society investigated the Brown Mountain phenomenon and said that the lights were simply car headlights or lights of passing trains. However, this was disproven after a large flood wiped out all the roads and tracks on the mountain, and the lights still appeared.

There are many theories about the Brown Mountain Lights, as with many Appalachian folk stories. However, the most common is the story told by Native Americans in the area. Cherokee legend holds that there was a battle between Catawba and Cherokee people on Brown Mountain. After the battle was over, mothers, widows, and sisters set out into the mountains, carrying torches to look for their loved ones. This explains the glowing lights as the spirits of the Cherokee women who are still looking.

Legends aside, Forest Service officers and scientists from Appalachian State University have also checked the lights in recent years. Current scientific theories about the lights guess that they could be caused by natural gasses on the mountain or ball lightning. Whatever the Brown Mountain Lights are, they can be seen very regularly in North Carolina, most often during the night between September and November.

Nails break easily, so it's important to teach your child how to care for them. Teaching your child the following tips from dermatologists can help your child develop healthy nail-care habits.

01. Keep nails trimmed.

Short nails stay cleaner and break less often. Dermatologists advise that an adult trim a child's nails until the child is about 9 or 10 years old. At about that age, children can trim their own nails if they feel comfortable doing so.

When your child is ready to trim his or her own nails, you should teach your child the following:

- Trim nails after taking a bath or shower. Nails are softer then, so trimming is easier.
- Use a nail clipper or nail scissors to trim nails. Cutting nail too short may lead to painful ingrown nails, which happens when nails grow into the skin beside them.
- Cut fingernails almost straight across. Round a little at the corners to keep the nails strong.
- Cut toenails straight across. This reduces the chance of getting an ingrown nail.

02. Dry the hands well.

Teaching children to dry their hands well is important. If nails stay wet for a while, a nail infection can develop.

03. Use lotion on the fingernails.

The best time to use lotion is right after washing the hands and after taking a bath or shower.

04. Stop toenail problems with good nail care.

Just because toenails are often out of sight does not mean they should be out of mind. Following these dermatologists' tips can help keep toenails healthy:

- When buying shoes, leave enough room for toes to move.
- Change socks daily. Dirty socks can lead to toenail infections.
- Wear flip-flops rather than walking barefoot when using public showers or pools. Walking barefoot in public places can lead to a toenail infection, athlete's foot, or plantar warts.

05. Check your nails.

Children's nails are usually healthy, but teaching them to check their nails at a young age develops a healthy habit.

Checking nails is important because the first sign of health problems can show up in a nail. These signs include a dark mark and a nail that starts to break into small pieces and fall off. If either happens, it's time to see a dermatologist.

38. According to the reading, who is the MOST likely to have a nail infection?

- (A) Darren, a school basketball team player who washes and changes his socks every day.
- (B) Mrs. Smith, a housewife who uses some lotion on her fingernails after doing the dishes.
- (C) Elaine, a secretary who trims her five-year-old son's nails and stops him biting his nails.
- (D) Mr. Wang, a fish seller who can hardly dry his hands off when dealing with the seafood.

39. Which of the following is TRUE?

- (A) If you get an Athlete's foot or plantar warts, you have to see a dermatologist.
- (B) The ways you trim your kid's fingernails and toenails are totally the same.
- (C) Checking nails is so important that parents should do it for their young kids.
- (D) The longer the nails are, the more signs of health problems will show up.

40. Which picture shows the CORRECT way to cut a toenail?

11. M: Don't you know that sugar isn't good for your health? Stop eating candy.

W: But that makes me happy. Fine. I'll have some popcorn then.

M: That's too sweet, too. You aren't a kid anymore. Please choose food more wisely.

W: You are my boyfriend, not my father.

Question: Why is the woman angry with her boyfriend?

12. M: Mr. and Mrs. Patrick, I'm sure you will like the house. It has a nice big kitchen.

W: We seldom cook, but that's fine.

M: And this is the bathroom. It has two windows, so the bathroom gets dry easily after you use it.

W: Wait! Does the house have only two bedrooms?

M: Yes.

W: Well, we need to think about it then. We are a family of five.

Question: Which house may Mr. and Mrs. Patrick look for?

13. M: Lily, stop playing computer games and start studying for your math test!

W: Dad, I'm not playing computer games for fun. After playing computer games for an hour, I'm able to think more clearly and more quickly.

M: Are you lying to me? Is this a kind of trick that you use to fool me into letting you play computer games?

W: Of course not! You'll see. I'll get 100 on the math test tomorrow.

Question: What does the girl have his father believe?

14. Hi, William. This is Emily. It is the end of the year. My husband and I are going to the temple to make a big meal for the poor tomorrow. I remember you want to help the poor, don't you? So, if you still want to do it, Scott and I welcome you to join us tomorrow. We also want to have a special Cosplay show for the elderly in the mountains. Give me a call to tell me what you think.

Question: What is Emily trying to say?

15. Come celebrate Shinkai's latest movie, which has been a big hit since it was on. The party will start at 5 p.m. this Saturday at Queen Museum. Everyone who wants to join is asked to wear their strangest costumes and masks. We will have great food and great fun. We will even have prizes for those who wear the most special costumes. Please email or call Tammy this week. We can't wait to spend a happy night with you.

Question: What is the talk mostly about?
