Jeanne Louise Calment was born to a working family on February 21, 1875, in Arles, Bouches-du-Rhône, Provence. She had an older brother, François.

Calment married at age 21. Her husband was rich, so she didn't have to work. She was very careful in taking care of her body. She applied olive oil to her skin every day of her life. She kept biking until her hundredth birthday. Around age 100, she hurt her leg, but she got well quickly and was soon able to walk again. She could walk around until she was 114.

However, Calment had some habits that were not so good for health. For example, Calment started smoking when she was young and didn't stop it until she was 117. And she liked to eat chocolate. She ate one kilogram of chocolate every week!

In 1963, Calment lost her family. She lived on her own until she was 109. Then in 1985, she decided to move to the nursing home, the Maison du Lac. Calment lived a regular life every day there. She woke up at 6:45 am, and started the day at her window, thanking God for living a long life and for another beautiful day. Then she had her breakfast and exercised for a few minutes. At night, she went to bed at 10:00 o'clock. Nurses at the nursing home said that she was quicker than other old people who were 30 years younger.

Calment died at the age of 122. She set the Guinness World Records for being the longest living person in history.

The good news is that now you can work out and enjoy the fun of exercise RIGHT AT HOME. With the help of technology, online exercise lessons are going viral these years. By getting onto the Internet, you can watch the videos on your cellphone or computer right where you are. All you need to do is find enough space and follow the trainers to move your body. - Albert: These exercise lessons are not my thing. I am more an outdoor person. I enjoy nature a lot and like making friends. So doing exercise alone at home is not interesting at all. The online lessons cost me a lot. I want to stop them and get my money back.
