Do you eat fruits and vegetables every day? It is believed that having as many fruits and vegetables as possible can do good to your body. But what if the fruits and vegetables on your shopping list are not in season or will be eaten later? Then frozen vegetables and fruits would be another choice. However, with a lot of fake information spreading around today, frozen foods are said to be less healthy. In fact, many studies have shown that frozen greens and fruits have as many nutrients as the fresh ones.

Before being frozen, vegetables are collected when they are grown. In other words, these frozen greens and fruits are picked at their best quality. With rich nutrients, they then quickly go through being frozen and packaged under a special environment, making sure that their nutrients can be fully stored. In this way, shoppers can enjoy their best flavor and take in the needed nutrients. On the other hand, fresh vegetables and fruits are often carried by trucks for long distances, sometimes making them lose nutrients along the way.

No matter which one you like, to stay healthy, it is important to eat at least five different kinds of greens and fruits. Whether being frozen or fresh, they can make you strong and keep away from sickness. It's up to you!

Since the first movie, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, was released in 1937, Disney has made many successful movies. Most people in the world are sure to have seen at least one or two. Several of children's favorite ones are about love stories between princes and princesses. However, are the stories close to real life? A new study from Duke University says that Disney movies may send some wrong messages to children.

According to the study, Disney fails to show poor people's problems in their movies. Take the Seven Dwarfs and Aladdin for example, the dwarfs work happily as miners, which is quite different from those miners in real life. Besides, the story of Aladdin may make children think that it's easy to become rich in one night. What's more, the rich characters in the movies are unhappy, but the poor are always much happier. Yet, is it really like that in the real world?

Besides, Disney movies oversimplify love and marriage. As the study points out, Snow White fell head over heels in love and married the rich prince whom she met just once and barely knew. As for the seven dwarfs who truly cared about her and even kept waiting for her to wake up, they were never seen as possible romantic partners. Though love can bring two people together, can it really conquer all? That's a question to be answered.

Some may argue that Disney movies shouldn't be taken too seriously because, after all, they are not real. Yet it is important for us adults to talk about those hidden problems with children so that they won't get fooled by those stories.
