For some people, time is not important. They don’t care about it. Some may even think it’s OK to be late. Tom is this kind of person. He is always late for everything. For example, he is late for school every day. He often turns in his homework late. When he goes out with his friends, his friends always have to wait for him for more than half an hour. If you ask him why he is late, he will tell you that he is not late. He thinks other people are too early for many things.

There is an important test today. Tom is late again, so he can’t take the test. When students are late for the test for more than ten minutes, they can’t take the test. That’s one of the rules of the tests. Tom has to take the test next year. Tom feels so sad but can’t do anything about it. He learns his lesson from it this time.
