Several years ago, Chang Ho-shen was a student at an art school. His father made a living by selling guavas from different farms then. One day, Ho-shen's mother called to tell him the heartbreaking news—his dear father passed away. He soon came back to his hometown with great sadness. After _____ (31) _____ for a long time, he decided to grow guavas on his own because those delicious guavas _____ (32) _____.

However, growing guavas wasn't as _____ (33) _____ as he thought. He spent lots of money, but didn't grow many of them well. Then he went to school and gained much useful knowledge about guavas. After he finally grew sweet and beautiful guavas, an interesting idea came to his mind: "If people get to know more about my guavas, it might encourage them to buy guavas from me." Then he put a QR-code on each bag of his guavas, so people could get to know more about Ho-shen's guavas with one simple action: scanning _____ (34) _____.

This idea sounded nothing special at first, but it taught people how to choose good guavas. It made _____ (35) _____, and now they want to buy his guavas. He made much more money since then. In April 2016, a famous cook in Taipei called to order one hundred and fifty kilograms guavas from him. At first, he thought it was a trick, but later he found out that the cook wanted to use his guavas at a state banquet.

For many foreigners at the state banquet, the sweet and beautiful guavas meant "Taiwan." They will think of Taiwan when they see guavas in their own country someday.

Do you speak dog? Your first answer to this question might be “No!” However, a study in Hungary shows that most people can truly understand a dog’s barks.

Scientists recorded the sounds of dogs playing, meeting a stranger, being at home by itself, and attacking people. Then they played the sounds back to other people and asked them what these barks meant. The number of right answers was high. These results shouldn’t come as a surprise. After all, people have kept dogs for more than fifteen thousand years. That’s a lot of time for dogs to learn how to show their feelings to people.

As the study shows, people also grow to understand dogs. What’s more, dogs can read people’s faces or their action. Some dogs can even understand people’s words if they get some special training. Dogs may not use their lips and tongue well enough to “speak” people’s words. However, that doesn’t stop our best friends from “talking” with us.
