Do you know blueberries? They are good for your body, and eating them can help keep you healthy. There are also lots of good foods out there: broccoli, green tea, strawberries, and many kinds of fish. My favorite, though, is blueberries. They're high in fiber and vitamin C. And they're really low in fat and sodium or salt, so they are good for your heart. Check out the nutrition about blueberries in the table below.

Nutrition Facts: Blueberries
Serving Size 100 grams
Amount Each Serving

Everyone can enjoy art, and kids can, too. In fact, the basic parts of art are easy to understand. You can use these ideas to help kids find out more about the art. Start by talking about the lines in a picture. You can ask your child to follow the lines in a picture with their finger. Some art is full of straight lines, others have curvy lines and still others are a mix of both. The next part is shape. Take some time to look for shapes in the picture. Some pictures have geometric shapes while others have many curvy shapes. This is a great time to learn about shapes. Then move on to talking about color. Look for the major colors in the picture, name them and see how they look next to each other. "That red really stands out when you put it next to the white." Last, take a moment to look for texture. Paintings of animals often have different texture. Look carefully at the ways that artists use to make fur look fluffy. They sometimes put some layers of paint together creating a thick texture, or they cut in wood to make the work more real.

It can be great fun to enjoy art together with kids. You can also talk about these parts of art when you are looking at the works of art by children. After children learn the basic parts of art, they know how to use them to create the messages they want to send with their own art. This may take many years, but you are helping your child to read and speak the language of art.

Question: How much does the woman have to pay?

15. M: Good morning. I'm Johnny. Today I'm going to share with you how to draw my favorite painting, the Starry Night. The painting was painted by Vincent van Gogh, a talented painter.

Here are some tips for you to paint the Starry Night like Vincent van Gogh. First of all, you'll need some colors like white, yellow, brown, different colors of blue, and black. Second, try to draw some white circles and the lines on the paper. After that, you can paint some small, short, dark blue dots with a small brush from the left to right. Then, you'll get a beautiful painting.

Hope you'll have fun in the drawing.
